

KRAMER AUSENCO VOLUNTEERS FOR CONSERVATION DAY

On Saturday the 17th May 2014, 5 volunteers from Kramer Ausenco and Ausenco took part in the Ausenco Gives Back conservation day at The Wolston and Centenary Creek catchments area near Mt Ommaney in Brisbane, Australia.

The area had recently been cleared of large invasive tree species, the volunteers helped with the removal of the seedlings sprouting from the seedbank. The team put in about 22.5 man hours between the 5 of them, and managed to clear a large pile of weeds from the area. The team consisted of Adam Kramer, Michael Kramer, Steve Steven Anderson, Joshua Nay and Justin Nay

A big thank you to the team for giving up their Saturday morning to partake in this conservation work.

The conservation day was organised by Ausenco Gives Back and Conservation Volunteers Australia. If you would like to find out more please email give.back@ausenco.com

L-R: Adam Kramer, Michael Kramer, Joshua Nay and Steven Anderson

Adam Kramer hard at work

L-R: Steven Anderson, Michael Kramer, Adam Kramer, Joshua Nay listen on as Dennis Gannaway from Conservation Australia explains the ecological value of the site.